

Now We See You is a student-led portrait and storytelling project that turns overlooked work into stories, portraits, and public recognition. The first chapter started at Lake Washington High School. The platform is now built so students at other schools can launch their own chapter.

Why become a Site Lead?

BUILD SOMETHING REAL
Launch a chapter at your school instead of just joining another existing club.

LEAD A CREATIVE TEAM
Bring together artists, writers, photographers, and organizers around one shared project.

CREATE WORK PEOPLE SEE
Turn interviews and portraits into QR-linked profiles, displays, flyers, and school-wide stories.

MAKE A VISIBLE IMPACT
Help people in your school get recognized, then see the response through real community engagement and QR activity.

NO CODE. NO WEBSITE BUILDING.

The platform is already built with multi-school support. A new Site Lead gets a ready-to-use chapter, admin tools, role-based student access, profiles, QR tracking, and a public school gallery.

You will not be doing it alone

Evaan will hold weekly meetings with new Site Leads to help choose the first profile, work through school onboarding, answer workflow questions, review progress, and help each chapter get from its first idea to its first published story.

What does a Site Lead actually do?

- Find a supportive staff advisor or administrator at your school.
- Choose the first person your chapter wants to recognize and get the project started.
- Build a small team and match people to roles such as Journalist, Artist, Photographer, or Community Outreach.
- Coordinate the first profile from nomination through publication and help the chapter grow from there.

This could be for you if you like...

portrait art, photography, interviewing, writing, design, organizing people, building something new at school, or simply noticing the people everyone else walks past.

START WITH ONE PROFILE

One school. One staff member. One story. One portrait or visual. Learn from it, then grow.

Interested in starting one at your school?

Evaan will help you get set up and stay involved through weekly Site Lead meetings as your first chapter takes shape.
